

DU Spec and other updated resources for the redesigned Form 1003

February 26, 2019

To help you prepare for the implementation of the redesigned Uniform Residential Loan Application (URLA/Form 1003), we have published the final Desktop Underwriter® (DU®) Specification of the test period, along with additional updated resources. Our updates include both Fannie Mae-specific and joint-GSE resources, as follows:

- Updated Joint-GSE resources, available on our URLA page:
 - FAQs
 - ULAD Mapping Document
 - URLA \(Form 1003\) Instructions Document

- Updated/New Fannie Mae-specific resources, available on our Technology Integration page:
 - DU Specification
 - New test cases
 - Implementation Guide
 - Fannie Mae DU Wrapper

For more information on the redesigned Form 1003, visit our URLA page. For integration-related information, visit our Technology Integration page.

The optional use period between July 2019 and January 2020 is a transition period as you prepare for the February 2020 mandate to use the new Form 1003. To see upcoming milestones, view the URLA Implementation Timeline.
